Preparing for Kindergarten during the Summer!

The move from a preschool setting to Kindergarten is an important transition for young children and families. Research shows that children are more likely to be successful in school both academically and socially, when families are engaged in school related activities. To help children transition through summer, play games such as "Look for the letter B" at the grocery store or places in the community. Simple cooking activities using measuring cups builds language and math skills.

Continue to support social emotional development by practicing patience, making friends, taking turns, and problem solving. It is a good idea for families to visit the school with their child and talk about areas that will be the same as preschool, or different. Positive interactions make a big difference and supports a smooth transition.
